AN INTERNATIONAL ISSUE RAISED IN U. S. SHIP SEIZURE

"War at Sea" Overshadows Static Reports on Land At Present

INVESTIGATION STARTS

"City of Flint" Is Sailed By Germans to Kola, In North Russia

By International News Service

War at sea today overshadowed static reports on land as Germany's seizure of the American freighter, "City of Flint," alleged bearer of contrabands for England, raised an international issue.

War developments:

Washington—State Department and maritime commission officials investigated capture of the "City of Flint," first American vessel seized in the war. She was taken by a German warship to Tromsø, Norway, put in charge of a German crew and sailed to Kola, North Russia, dispatches said.

Berlin—American charge de affairs Kirk was ordered to make an informal investigation of the "City of Flint" incident. German quarters said present information indicated its capture was justifiable. Quiet was reported on the western front. The propaganda ministry warned that North Sea gestures could be expected, in Foreign Minister Von Ribbentrop's Danzig speech tonight.

London—Britain sought to win a guarantee of continued Italian neutrality by promising non-interference with Italy's influence in the Balkans. A Balkan peace bloc conference is due in Belgrade in mid-November. With the sinking of two British and one Swedish ship yesterday, the war's merchant ship toll mounted to 80.

Paris—Thirteen mechanized German divisions manned by 100,000 soldiers have been massed on the Belgium, Dutch and Luxembourg borders, and French military observers expect the German offensive to strike through those neutral nations.

Moscow—Russian-Finland negotiations again were expected, as Finns prepared to return to Helsinki for tonight for fresh instructions on new Russian proposals.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 24—The State Department today instructed the American Embassy in Berlin to ascertain formally the fate of the American steamship, "City of Flint," reported to have been seized by a German warship.

State Trooper Faces Opposition From State

MAUCH CHUNG, Pa., Oct. 24—(INS)—State Police Corporal Benjamin Franklin, charged with slaying Joan Stevens, 14, of Nesquehoning, faced stern opposition from the Commonwealth today at a hearing on his plea for a change of venue from Carbon county for his trial.

Franklin sought a change of venue before Judge William G. Thomas on grounds that "unfavorable publicity" had prejudiced public opinion against him. He is accused of pumping eight bullets into the girl's frail body as she sat with him and another trooper in a police car last June 5th.

Opposing a switch from Carbon county were District Attorney Albert Heimbach for the county and Deputy Attorney General Harrington F. Adams for the Attorney General's office. Heimbach has declared he will demand "absolute proof" of contentions of prejudice against Franklin. Counsel for a citizens' justice committee and for the victim's parents are not contesting Franklin's plea.

Alumni Association To Continue Its Activities

Bristol High School's newly-formed Alumni Association will remain intact. That decision was reached at the monthly meeting of the organization in the high school last night.

The small group, which had been laboring practically in vain for nearly a year without much encouragement in the way of interest shown in permanently establishing the organization and planning activities for its development and progress, had been working alone in this field.

Disappointed, they had decided to abandon the idea if, after this meeting, there was no further interest shown in the association. But they were jubilantly surprised at an unusually large turnout for the October session, and with much interest shown by all, the association laid plans for progressing and developing.

The association took measures toward definite organization and discussed plans for securing a charter from the school. When this is received, it will be held open for a limited time for charter members to the association. Harry Hinman has been appointed a committee of one to secure information and necessary facts concerning the adoption of the charter.

Plans for such activities as a skating party, card party, bake sale, and dances were discussed as a means to raise revenue for the progress of the association. But no definite action was taken on these suggestions as yet. However, the social committee will take up the suggestions and discuss them further at a future meeting.

One of the outstanding suggestions offered was that of an "Alumni Homecoming Day and Rally" at some future home game of Bristol's football team for the current season. A special committee consisting of Benny Silber as chairman, Michael Petrick, Harry Hinman, T. Profy, and Louis Tomlinson, will meet later to make arrangements for such an occasion.

The suggestion of an Alumni representation on the basketball court also met with the approval of the association to enter a "proposed" Lower Bucks County Alumni Basketball League next winter. Louis Tomlinson was appointed to investigate the formation of such a league and to make as near complete a report as possible on the progress of the potential circuit at the November meeting.

It was also decided to have a recorded dance at the close of each monthly session of the association to induce more Alumni members to attend the meetings for the growth and progress of the association. This plan, pending approval of school authorities, will be inaugurated at the November session.

WRITES TO STROLLER ABOUT 1ST MOVIES HERE

Says William Britton Was Owner and Operator of First Machine

FAILS TO MENTION PLACE

By "The Stroller"

During the latter part of August and the first few days of September, a heated controversy took place in the column written by the Stroller in an effort to establish the place where the first moving pictures were shown in Bristol. The Stroller asked readers of the column to inform what they knew about the history of motion pictures in Bristol. As a result of this appeal communications flooded the Stroller's desk and one reader after another argued to establish his or her point.

On September 1st, Mrs. R. Goodman, Bristol, Pa., R. F. D. No. 2, wrote that her deceased father, William Britton, owned and operated the first motion picture machine in Bristol, first in the building now occupied by the office of John L. Kilcoyne, Esq., Bath street, and then later in the building now occupied as Dries' furniture store, Pond and Mill streets.

We thought that settled the controversy, but today another communication came to our desk on this subject. It substantiates in some respects the article by Mrs. Goodman, but the location of the building where moving pictures were first shown in Bristol is not definitely stated in the communication.

The article reads: At last after piecing together the various bits of information received here and there, we are able to furnish a true story of the introduction of Continued on Page Two

Here and There in Bucks County Towns

Beginning their third project, which calls for 12,000 feet of work, the W. P. A. project of the laying of gutters, curbing and sidewalks in Doylestown this year will total at least 30,000 feet. It was announced by G. Thawley Hayman, chairman of the street committee of Borough Council.

Ralph J. Hamilton, who is in charge of the W. P. A. work in the County Seat, and his workmen, are now busy laying a curb and gutter along the West side of Green street along the Clemmens tract which will eliminate a deep ditch on that side of the street.

Mr. Hamilton pointed out that three W. P. A. projects have been handled in Doylestown and that work on the third project has begun. He estimated that at least 30,000 running feet of curbing, gutter and sidewalks have been laid by the W. P. A.

The Bucks County Council of Parents and Teachers was represented by 27 members and three visitors at the southeastern district meeting in Reading.

Over 300 delegates were registered from the several counties which compose the district.

FIND 52-INCH GRINDING STONE AT MORRISVILLE

3,000 Pound Stone Is Uncovered In Creek; Believed To Be Very Old

AT FIRST MILL SITE

MORRISVILLE, Oct. 24—An old mill grinding stone, recently uncovered here in the creek at the foot of Chambers street hill, when the dike wall cut off the water from the Delaware River and drained the creek, could probably tell more of Morrisville's history than any book, if it could only talk.

Observations made by J. R. Howell, who with his brother, Edmund C. Howell, and William Johnson, have continued to conduct the flour and feed business from which this very grinding stone is said to have come, show that the stone is probably from the first industry Morrisville ever had back in 1772 when Adam Hooks began building a grist mill.

This very stone rests now on the site of that first mill and due to its years of submersion is in excellent condition, with every furrow well-defined and the "cock-eye" ball iron fast and unrust. It weighs 3,000 pounds and is 52 inches in diameter and 15 or more inches thick. The stone was used with one of equal size and weight to crush grain in that original mill, which used only one set, composed of two stones. Geologists say that this stone uncovered here is made of sandstone, probably quarried at Wilburth.

By FRANK R. KENT

"Distributed by McNaught Syndicate, Inc."

Gold

Washington, Oct. 23. THERE are within the Administration two views on the business to be done in this country once the embargo on arms is raised, and it is not surprising they should be so wide apart. On nearly every basic fiscal question that has arisen in the last few years, there has been a sharp division among Government financial officials, usually settled by the President inclining toward the less orthodox.

IN ONE group are the spenders; in the other, the budget balancers; one tends toward inflation, the other toward deflation; one is radical, the other conservative. In this

Among the Bucks county delegation were the president, Mrs. John A. Flood, New Hope; the vice-president, Mrs. Irvin L. MacNair, Chalfont, and the treasurer, Mrs. Harry Lamb, Trevose.

Local associations represented were New Hope, South Langhorne, Morrisville, Cornwells Heights, Northampton, Mill Creek and New Britain.

Speakers included presidents of three of the state teachers' colleges. The president of the district is Mrs. Ralph M. Fox, Morrisville, Bucks County Council's first president, and Mrs. John A. Flood, president of the Bucks County Council at the present time, was elected second vice-president of the district at the meeting in Reading.

With more than 200 people present, the 49th annual meeting of the Pennsylvania German Society was held in Salem Reformed Church, Doylestown. Dr. B. F. Fackenthal, Jr., honorary chairman, was presented with a beautiful floral tribute in recognition of his services.

In an acceptance talk, Dr. Fackenthal said Bucks county has done more to uphold the traditions of the Pennsylvania Germans than any other county in the Commonwealth.

Ralph Beaver Strassburger, the president, spoke briefly of the society as going on record upholding the neutrality of the United States in the present conflict.

Mrs. William S. Mason sang a solo, "Save Me, O God," accompanied by Mrs. Walter Gorman, organist.

Henry S. Borneman, Philadelphia, is the secretary. Bishop DeSchweinitz, of Bethlehem, spoke briefly.

The invocation was pronounced by Dr. W. Sherman Kershner, Philadelphia, pastor of Heidelberg Reformed Church.

The 25 Ayrshires owned in the National Farm School herd at Farm School, Pa., completed the creditable herd average of 778 pounds 4.00% milk, 31.10 pounds butterfat on twice-a-day milking in the Ayrshire Herd Test during the month of August.

One of the highest individual productions made among the members of this herd during the month was that of a three-year-old heifer named Farm School Princess Min, that turned in a yield of 1215 pounds milk, 47.39 pounds butterfat.

NOTE 89 SPECIES OF BIRDS AT PENN'S MANOR

Trek by Members of Ornithological Clubs Is Most Enlightening

SEE BALDPATE DUCK

Described as a "bird paradise" by members of the Miller and Delaware Valley Ornithological Clubs, is the woodland section of Penn's Manor, near the Delaware River, that group having participated in a field trip, Sunday.

Eighty-nine species of birds were chalked up by 17 members who participated in the trek.

This number, unusually high for southeastern Pennsylvania, was attributed to the fact that the Penns Manor section is a favorable gathering spot for both land and water-fowl. Sixteen of the 89 species were waterfowl.

The most unusual discoveries were a baldpate duck and a white-winged scoter, the latter seldom seen away from the seacoast. Ornithologists in the party included J. Fletcher Street, Julian K. Potter, Arthur C. Emlen and W. C. Whitaker.

RED CROSS TRAINS THE YOUTH TO AID HUMANITY

Young Folks Play Important Part In Drama of World Events

ROLL CALL APPROACHES

One of the most important functions of the local Red Cross Chapter is the training of youth to take an active part in alleviating the needs of humanity under the Red Cross banner, according to Blackwell Newhall, chairman of the chapter.

Today, as never before, the youth of the world are playing an important part in the drama of human events. The desire for self-expression, which they have in common with their elders, is finding outlet in many new directions.

Nowhere is this trend more noticeable than in the rapid growth of youth movements in almost every land. They lend support and color to a variety of causes and prosper under a variety of names. In some of them enrollment is compulsory and the purposes are directed by their elders toward uncertain ends.

It is therefore significant and an augury for good that the largest youth movement in the world is the International Junior Red Cross—that 20,000,000 of the youth of 48 nations are Continued on Page Four

THAT SAFETY BAND

Many would like to feel that the action of the Pan-American conference is establishing a 300-mile coastal safety band will keep war from a nearer approach to American shores. It is reported that the delegates to that meeting "regarded their stern warning to belligerents to keep out of the hemispheric band of safety as their most vital achievement."

Being inclined to view this matter from the point of realism, Americans will feel that this security band is just as secure as the naval strength of the Americas can make it. And that is just about as secure as the naval strength of the United States can make it.

War zones are not easily defined unless there is force to give them effect. The same is true of peace zones. The British view is of point. Here it is, as contained in a London dispatch. "The Western Hemisphere's 'safety band' is a 'novel idea' but replete with imponderables," sources close to British naval affairs said today. The 300-mile-deep safety zone necessitates new conceptions of international law, the sources said. They added that the no war zone was based on the Americas' eagerness to stay neutral."

If there is no force to say it nay, belligerency is apt to assert itself wherever and whenever the opportunity is presented.

FATE SNEERS

Some 50,000 postoffices stretch throughout this country, each identifying a hamlet or a town or a city. Among all these 50,000 postal station locations, there is only one community carrying the timely name of War.

It was in War, West Virginia that a school bus tumbled over a cliff the other day. Five children and the driver were killed; 71 pupils were injured.

Fate, with her bloody hands so busy overseas, has a cruel twist in her machinations. Of 50,000 spots she chose one named War for the consummation of a tragedy which brought warlike grief and suffering where no war exists.

There was no smile on Fate's features when she permitted this abominable coincidence. Fate was sneering at us just as she sneers at all the world in these times.

In the sense that Poland still exists, there is a ball team named the Cincinnati Reds.

When the industry was in its infancy, a young man named "Billie" Britton, who was employed in the Bristol Carpet Mills, became interested in moving pictures and purchased a machine. While he was planning to show moving pictures in Bristol he came in contact with a young man from Burlington, named Edward Subers. Moving pictures had already been introduced in Burlington and Subers was anxious to open up a place in Bristol. He made a proposition to Britton, but before it could be consummated a theatrical agent came to town and rented the old "rink" building on Wood street, afterward known as the Colonial Theatre. Hearing that Britton owned a moving picture machine he made him an offer to exhibit moving pictures in connection with his theatrical adventure. Britton accepted the proposition and thus to him, "Billie" Britton, belongs the credit for having shown the first moving pictures in Bristol.

This theatrical adventure lasted about four weeks. In the meantime Subers had purchased a machine and had opened a show in the second story of Louis Dries, Mill and Pond streets, then known as Cabeen's Hall. The third day after the opening, Edward Lynn accepted the position of operator and has been identified with the local moving picture business ever since. Some months after Subers had started and his show was attracting large crowds, the company which furnished him with the reels of moving pictures, leased the Colonial Theatre and opened up a larger and better show. This opposition, combined with the action of the building inspector in declaring the Cabeen building unsafe because it lacked a fire escape, put Subers out of business and he removed to Trenton, N. J. The performances were continued in the Colonial Theatre for some time when the show was taken over by Earl Stanley.

By this time the town was becoming moving picture conscious and a show was opened in the little one-story building on the south side of Mill street, near Cedar, which had previously been used as the post office. Joseph Vansant, of Noah's Ark fame, owned the old building adjoining, which is now the site of Flue's bottling business. He built an addition in the rear and the gentleman who was conducting the show in the old post office building moved into the Vansant building. At the same time another show had opened in a building on Bath street adjoining the Clowson House. This show was operated by a man named Hunter, and Arthur Dungan was the pianist.

As the interest in moving pictures increased, Harry Streep purchased the site upon which the old post office building stood and erected what he named "The Bristol." Edward Subers returned to Bristol and leased the theatre from Streep. Later Max Cohen built the Family Theatre on Mill street near Radcliffe, which building is now a part of Spencer's Furniture Store, and leased it to Subers. Subsequently the Forrest Theatre was built at the intersection of Mill street and the railroad. After its destruction by fire it was rebuilt and is now known as the Grand Theatre.

Sometime after the building of the Family Theatre on Mill street, Harry McMullen leased from William E. Doran the land at the corner of Radcliffe and Market streets and built the Riverside Theatre. Recently this old theatre was demolished and the present beautiful structure known as "The Bristol" was erected upon its site.

After Subers removed to Trenton a man named Deering leased Cabeen's Hall, erected a landing and fire escape on the Pond street side of the building, and began to show moving pictures. He changed the name from Cabeen's Hall to the Lyric Theatre.

I believe that this is a true and authentic history of the beginning and rise of the moving picture business in Bristol.

and-a-half-billion-dollar favorable trade balance will be increased much, if any.

BUT more concern is felt by this group about the method of payment than the volume of business. For example, they say that England now has in this country about two billion dollars worth of gold. In addition the British produce nearly sixty per cent. of all the gold annually mined in the world. The argument is that naturally England will take advantage of the fact that we are the sole market for this gold at the artificial price of $35 an ounce. Actually, gold is worth not more than $20 an ounce. That would mean, for one thing, that they would get our materials at nearly fifty per cent. of their value.

FOR another, it would increase our stock of gold, already too large, beyond the danger point. Ultimately, it would force all other nations to resort to the managed currency game along German lines, which is conducted without reference to gold. The result would be to leave us with billions of buried gold, which had become valueless. In brief, if the British take advantage of the artificial price of gold we can be made practically to finance the war. After it is over, with our economy badly dislocated, we will have underground all the gold there is, but it will be worthless. The only way to avert this danger, it is argued, is to stop buying gold. That is the argument.

IT is made by the Eccles school of financiers but bitterly opposed by the Treasury school. The latter say the whole idea is fantastic. In the first place, the English have no such notion and would play no such game. Payment here for goods will be made from the proceeds of the sale of British securities. Perhaps, in the end, if the law lasts long enough, it is inevitable that we will accumulate their gold, but that any such method as is suggested will be calculatedly followed by the British or any such result ensue is not within the realm of possibility.

BUT there is another view about gold, held by a man not connected with either group but whose realistic opinions on finance carry great weight. The suggestion that the gold we have, or will accumulate, ever will become valueless this man dismisses as absurd. No matter what the country and what

Plan For An Inter-State
Equestrian Competition

Horses from adjoining states and Pennsylvania, who have been competing at various shows during the past year, will make final effort for the year to win the Delaware Valley Challenge Cup, when the Interstate Equestrian competition between New Jersey and Pennsylvania takes place at Bristol Riding Club headquarters next Sunday. This cup is hotly contested for by foremost horses in the East, and it is expected by the committee of Bristol Horse Show that many top horses will show here previous to showing at the national horse show at Madison Square Garden, the following week.

The course the horses negotiate is the most difficult ever built for horses to show over, and thrills are promised for both riders and spectators.

Riding being a sport that all ages from the very young to the very old can and do enjoy, the club has instituted a class for those who have grown old in the sport. The rider must be at least 40 years old, and if he weighs over 195 pounds, he is given a handicap of six inches in height of the fences he jumps. The prize for this class has been donated by Mr. and Mrs. Lester B. Shoemaker, Tullytown, and will be presented by the youngest member, their son Stanley, to one of the oldest riders who wins the class.

The stone recognition. Several businessmen in the borough are planning to have it erected in a suitable central location here, in the form of a monument.

In 1799, after the first mill was 27 years in operation, a new and larger mill, with four pairs of grinding stones, was erected, just 260 feet south of the first along the creek. Then in 1855, the Howell brothers, William G. Charles W., and George A., erected a mill still located at its present location, 22 South Pennsylvania avenue. The present operators, the Howell brothers, are sons of Charles W. Howell, while Johnson is a son of a sister of the second generation.

Thus, the history of Morrisville's oldest continued enterprise, is concerned in only three sites, the first and second mills which used water power along the creek, and the present one, which uses oil.

Many illustrious owners have operated the mill before the Howells. After Hooks died, his widow and sons continued its operation; then came Colonel Samuel Ogden, a personal friend of George Washington; Robert Morris, after whom Morrisville was named; George Clymer and Thomas Fitzwater, who operated the mill for the Bank and Insurance Company of North America; and Marshal General Jean Victor Moreau, who served under Napoleon.

Washington at one time visited Colonel Ogden for two days here and fished in the very creek that small boys also used for fishing before it was drained. Fishing for perch, the first President of the United States in his diary relates he had more success on the second day here than on the first.

The stone now rests on the dry creek bed, just about 100 yards south of the Lincoln Highway, awaiting removal to its appropriate spot in Morrisville's historic background.

HULMEVILLE

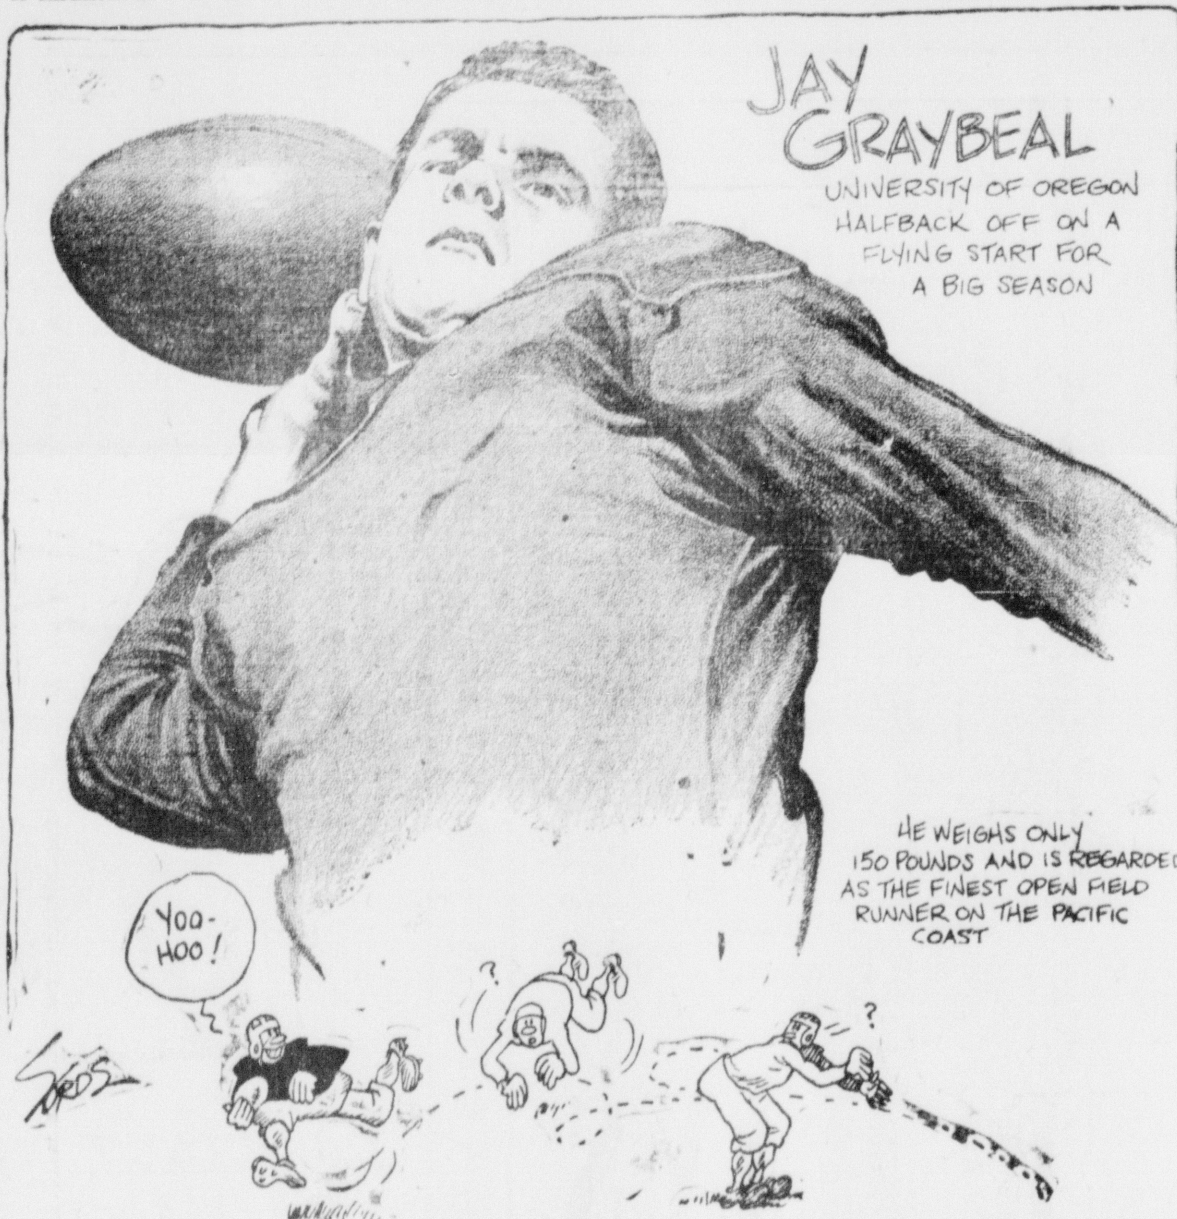

An operation was performed in Wills Eye Hospital, Philadelphia, yesterday, upon Kathleen McCarthy, her right eye being removed. The child's eyeball was cut on Sunday, when she was struck by a spoon. After treatment in Harriman Hospital, Bristol, she was removed to Philadelphia for the operation. Kathleen is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leo McCarthy, Main street.

A Halloween party is arranged by the Epworth League, to be held in Epworth Hall of Neshaminy Methodist Church, Monday evening, next. The public is invited.

PHILADELPHIA—(INS)—The torpedo which sent the British steamer Athenia to the bottom also lifted a tooth filling and a shoe from James Davis, Philadelphia survivor of the disaster. Ironically, Davis said his party rode the seas in a lifeboat "13 hours" before they were picked up by a British destroyer. He doesn't believe in omens now.

ST. FRANCIS JR. ELEVEN DOWNS BRISTOL LADS

EDDINGTON, Oct. 24—St. Francis Junior Varsity of Eddington showed a well-drilled team on Saturday afternoon in defeating the Bristol Catholic Boys Club, 13-7.

St. Francis elected to receive and Ketterlinus took the ball and advanced about 15 yards whence the visitors offered some tough defense work. After an exchange of punts, the ball was in the Saints' territory. On three line plunges the ball was brought within the two-yard stripe. Quarterback McGinley of the invaders carried the ball on the fourth play over center for the touchdown. The try for the extra point was made by dropkicker Harbins.

Midway in the second quarter the Blue and Gold started on a touchdown drive. With the whole team working smoothly, the ball was carried within striking distance of the goal when a fumble marred their chances. In one of the best plays of the afternoon, Ford of Eddington, intercepted a long Bristol forward pass and ran 15 yards to place the ball in scoring position. His team-mate, Raymond Morrelli, in fullback position, on a crashing center play, scored the touchdown. A forward pass thrown by left halfback Kucharick to left end Parker for point after touchdown was good.

The Bristolians made a serious threat in the fourth quarter to move goalward. They unleashed some outstanding and successful pass plays, but the orphan boys were fighting hard to protest their margin. However, the gallant battle via aerial lanes was finally stopped once more by the afternoon's hero, Harold Ford, who, on an interception, romped 62 yards into touchdown territory. His fellow orphans conveyed him all the way with a beautiful parade of blocks. The try for the extra point failed.

BRISTOL JUNIOR GRIDDERS NIP ST. FRANCIS, 7 TO 6

CORNWELLS HEIGHTS, Oct. 24—The Cardinal and Grey Junior Varsity Gridders of Bristol High spotted St. Francis Jayvees a 6-0 lead, then fought back to score themselves, boot the extra point and beat the home club in a close tilt played here yesterday afternoon, 7-6.

A sensational pass, completed for a net gain of 60 yards, accounted for St. Francis' six-pointer, John Kucharick tossed the aerial with Joe Ward receiving on the 30 and running over from there. Bristol scored when a St. Francis kick, bucking a strong wind, bounced down on their own three-yard line where Joe Iannucci grabbed it and stepped into the end zone. Tony DiAngelo added the extra point via a pretty place kick to provide the victory margin for the Cards J. V. third straight victory.

The highest herd average recorded among all herds enrolled in the Ayrshire Herd Test in the State of Pennsylvania during the month of August was that completed by the five Ayrshires owned by Tyson Nimick at New Hope. This group of splendid producing animals averaged 1105 pounds milk, 40.70 pounds butterfat on twice-a-day milking in that month.

The highest individual yield recorded in the herd during this period was that of Rushing Spring Dolly, a three-year-old heifer, that contributed a yield of 1395 pounds milk, 47.43 pounds butterfat.

Red Cross Trains The Youth To Aid Humanity

voluntary members of this organization conceived in and dedicated to the spirit of human service and international friendship.

In all the welter of present-day propaganda, there is none more potent than the two-word motto of the Junior Red Cross: "I Serve." Like its parent organization, the International Red Cross, of which it is a membership division—the Junior Red Cross came into being in response to the great needs for human service occasioned by war. And because it has devoted itself to deeds of service, expanding them into an effective international program, it has grown and prospered until it is today a force for peace and understanding among the nations.

When the United States entered the war in 1917 there was a widespread demand among the children and their teachers for Red Cross participation. In September of that year, when the schools had reconvened, the United States granted the first National Junior Red Cross charter, and 11,000,000 school children of this country enrolled.

This youthful army went to work with a will. Under the guidance of their teachers they undertook and carried on a production program which provided surgical dressings and comforts for the soldiers, furniture for hospitals and garments for refugee children in Europe. By September of 1919 this production program had totalled nearly 15,000,000 articles valued at more than $10,000,000. During this same period, cash contributions and membership dues amounted to more than three and one-half million dollars.

With the signing of the Armistice came the question of whether the work of the Junior Red Cross should be continued in the schools. It is significant that the affirmative answer came from the children themselves, and from the educators. The latter, having watched the growth of the humanitarian spirit and its effect upon the minds of those under their care, had no intention of closing this newly opened window in the classroom, through which their pupils were looking out upon the world.

Since that time the American Junior Red Cross has steadily perfected its own organization and has developed in highly effective program of activities which are local, national and international scope.

The purpose of its leaders, working in co-operation with the country's educators, has been to give the youth of America an organization of their own in which they can acquire, through participation in the life and needs of their time, a goodly share of the civic virtues and a real sense of social responsibility. This has been accomplished in remarkable degree by means of a program broadly conceived and carried on under three main heads: Service Projects, Health Activities, and International Understanding.

Organized in democratic and voluntary units within the elementary and high schools of the United States and its insular possessions, the members of the American Junior Red Cross participate extensively in the activities of the established Red Cross services, such as First Aid and Life Saving, Disaster Relief, Home and Farm Accident Prevention, and Home Hygiene and Care of the Sick. But they also have ample opportunity, within the scope of their broadly conceived program, for the exercise of originality and initiative.

The American Junior Red Cross has become an integral and very important part of the American Red Cross. It is the Red Cross in our schools, training the citizens of tomorrow for the part they will play in local, national and international affairs.

Specified sums of the Roll Call objective of $325,000 will be used to maintain the vitally important work of the American Junior Red Cross.

An International Issue Raised In U. S. Ship Seizure

her second errand of mercy when she was captured by a German cruiser and taken to the Soviet port of Murmansk, according to word received in Stockholm today.

The "City of Flint" had aboard 38 survivors from the torpedoed British steamer "Stonegate," when taken by the Nazis.

The "City of Flint" first came into the international limelight when she rescued refugees from the sinking British passenger liner "Athenia," after the outbreak of the war.

The German vessel which captured the "City of Flint," according to Stockholm reports, was the armored cruiser "Emden."

Messages from Norway stated that a German submarine torpedoed the Stonegate. The crew of the Stonegate had barely time to take to the lifeboats. The "City of Flint" responded to an SOS broadcast by the victorious submarine commander.

Meantime, however, the "City of Flint" was hailed by the "Emden," which drew alongside and, after announcing the American vessel a prize of war, sent aboard a prize crew of 18 naval officers and men.

The "Stonegate" survivors were put ashore at Tromsø, and the "City of Flint," still under command of the German crew, headed toward the open sea.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 24—(INS)—The United States Government today awaited official word from its diplomatic representatives abroad on the reported seizure of the American steamship City of Flint.

American ambassador to Russia, Laurence Steinhardt, and consular attaches at Oslo were instructed by the State Department to furnish full information concerning the fate of the 4963-ton United States Lines vessel and its officers and crew.

The Department acted after the U. S. Maritime Commission received a report that the City of Flint had been seized by a German warship. The report added that the ship was boarded by a German prize crew which took it to Tromsø, Norway. Flying the Nazi flag, the City of Flint entered the Norwegian Port Saturday, according to the Commission's information.

On the same day, these advices said, the City of Flint sailed south from Tromsø presumably for the North Russian ports of Murmansk and Kola. Press dispatches stated the vessel is now at Kola where it is being detained by Soviet authorities.

While awaiting word from American officials at Moscow and Oslo, the Maritime Commission checked the City of Flint's cargo manifest against the list of goods declared as contraband by German and other belligerents.

More than 50 different types of goods were carried by the vessel, including such items as lard, cereals, canned meats, flour, canned goods, apples, wax lubricating oil, cotton, sewing machines, plows, tractors, asphalt, pitch, grease, shade rollers, machinery, silk, commercial chemicals, abrasive grains, disinfectants, feathers, rags, coffee, lumber, gauze, hair and wallboard.

The view that some of the items carried by the ship might be considered as contraband was advanced by some officials.

Although no word concerning the fate of the City of Flint's crew of 38, headed by Capt. J. A. Gainard, has been received, State Department attaches assumed they were safe. Press dispatches from Moscow indicated the German prize crew aboard the seized ship would be interned.

The Maritime Commission said the vessel had been seized while enroute from New York to Liverpool. No details concerning the exact location of the seizure were known in Washington.

International law calls for full compensation for cargoes and ships seized under such circumstances. This does not apply to munitions. The City of Flint could not carry munitions to England under the American neutrality act embargo on shipment of arms to belligerents.
